Zoomies - What Are They?

by Giavanna

My initial experience of Zoomies occurred five years ago.

It was a somewhat long car ride home from my breeder in Sarasota. My new mom held me in her arms for the entire four hour trip, as I slept peacefully. My new dad did all the driving. No sooner did we walk through the front entry door and I was placed gently onto the floor - did it happened!

All I can remember is the second my paws touched the tile - off I bolted. I frantically ran from one end of the house to the other over and over again! This was a terrific feeling!

Not too good of a first impression.

This explosion of energy caught my new parents by complete surprise. What happened to me? Did I short circuit? No! It was my very first episode of Zoomies!

Our human counterparts need to explain things in technical terms. Technically these burst of energy are known as FRAPs. This stands for Frenetic Random Activity Periods. Us canines refer to them as expressions of pure joy and ecstasy.

Below are six possible reasons why dogs get the Zoomies.

1. The need for more exercise - If your Yorkie is not getting enough exercise, zoomies can quickly help them to expel energy.
2. It's playtime - Zoomies are a fun way for your furbaby to engage you to play with them.
3. They just had a bath - Zoomies are the perfect way to dry-off quickly after getting cleaned in the bathtub.
4. Time of day - Even if you have a good routine, dogs are naturally more active during twilight hours. You are more likely to see zoomies happen in the evening.
5. Being happy - Zoomies can happen if your dog is so happy that it can burst. It could happen when they see their favorite human or arrive somewhere with space to run.
6. Overtired - This happens, especially when dogs are puppies, and they are worn out, but they don't know how to calm themselves down.

If your Yorkie is having a great time, play along with them and join in on the fun. Keep a close watch for anything that seems out of sorts. Work on physical and mental stimulation, and train them to quickly calm down to make sure they stay safe.
